Just Themselves

Author's Note:

Had to write some fluff after...earlier, so enjoy!

Christ I'm tired...

Mike was preparing the basement for El's arrival, they were gonna watch Star Wars! It was hard to contain his excitement, ever since she had come back Mike had done his best to make her happy, show her new things, make her feel special.

Hearing the doorbell upstairs ring, he immediately darted up the stairs, beating his mom to the door. Opening it revealed El standing there, hair looking a little longer, losing its natural curliness, but she still looked beautiful. Hopper was also standing there, waiting to speak with his mother, but he wasn't paying attention to him.

"Hi." Mike plainly said, unable to form coherent sentences with El standing inches away from him. He knew he was smiling like a goof, but he couldn't help it, she just made him feel good, happy.

"Hi." El softly said, taking a step to hug him, the dark haired boy returning the hug instantly. After Hopper was done speaking with his mom, they rushed downstairs, getting settled onto the couch, getting under a blanket, feeling in a more "romantic" mood.

She rested her head on his shoulder, and Mike couldn't stop smiling, or blushing for that matter. It was nice to just finally get to be like this, without having to worry about monsters or bad people from the government.

They could just relax, and be normal teenagers...
